[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

You would not think that the heart of New York City was full of crooks and brooks in which men still living had sailed their shingle shallops or fished for minnows and bullheads, but such is the fact. I know many men who recall these long buried streams, and who are looking rather expectantly to the time when the great trench of the rapid transit tunnel is opened here. It will uncover about a score of ancient watercourses, by the side of which the Indians pitched their bark topees, but which have been buried from sight, some of them, for centuries, under the deep mounds of sidewalk and pavement that have grown up over them. For many years be a flowing through the darkness into the East and North rivers, with, apparently, no prospect of ever seeing the light of day again.
The first shoveling of earth for the tunnel will probably be the opening very near, if not exactly over the fountain head of one of the most useful brooks of the old city. This was the body of water from which Maiden lake took its name. It rose at the junction of Nassau street and Park row, and in colored days sturdily dammed its way to its side the week's washing, which was made sweet and snowy in its limpid depths.

The Vanderbilts have just had to pay an inheritance tax of $50,000 that they did not intend to pay, but they will probably have "three squares" a day just the same. It was all over a bequest of $5,000,000 by the late W.
H. Vanderbilt, son of the old commodore, to his son, who was like his grandfather, named Cornelius. Application for relief was made on the ground that the inheritance tax law was not passed when William H. Vanderbilt died. In opposition it was argued that the bequest was practically made under the will of Cornelius Vanderbilt, who died after the law went into effect, and who in his will exercised the power of appointment by virtue of which the money passed.
W. H. Vanderbilt, you see, left the money to his son to be given to the son's children, the division, however being left to the son.

There was probably no man in this country, or in the world, whom more people had seen and with whom more people felt an almost personal acquaintance than Dan Rice, the best known clown who ever amused the patrons of the circus ring. His name was not Rice, but Macaron. He died last week at the age of 77.
"Uncle Dan," as he was called, had been sick for a long time, but was able to go out driving until a few days ago, when he took to his bed. The old man had an interesting story. He was born in New York, but his father, Daniel Macaron, was a Frenchman, and "Dan Rice," after a famous clown in Ireland. He made three independent fortunes, but died a poor man. He owned three different shows during his day and traveled over the whole United States and in much of Europe.

The great Fifth Avenue hotel here is to be placed upon the market at public auction and the announcement has caused no end of speculation as to what may be contemplated by men interested in real estate for no such large hotel would be thought of if it were known that the bidding would be lively. The Fifth Avenue has been the Republican party headquarters for a generation, and it is also a favorite hotel for a great many people all over the country. Its lobbies have been the meeting place of the famous business men, and its service to all who frequent it has been the best.
Whatever comes of it, it will still remain, I hope, a hotel, for I have eaten many good dinners there and hope to eat many more. The hotel, by the way, had the reorganization scheme which had the publishing will go on as of yore although on a smaller business basis than for many years.
The bonded indebtedness has been reduced one-half and the fixed annual interest charges from $200,000 to $35,000. The reorganization is solely in the interest of the creditors.

Well for Ladysmith.

Pleter's Hill the Latest Capture.
The Besieged in Desperate Shape —Water Purified and Undrinkable and Cannot Be Boiled for Lack of Fuel—No Further Word From Roberts.

London, March 1.—General Buller's distinct success in storming Pleter's hill brings the rescue of Ladysmith near, but the war office intimates late night that an immediate announcement of relief need not be expected. The going to and fro at midnight of officials and messengers suggested that important news had been received. If this were the case, Ladysmith would obviously desired to sleep on it, before taking the public into his confidence.
General Buller's successful attack after the hard fighting of Friday, and it was impossible for his execution begin during the armistice of Sunday.
In proposing the armistice the British commander stipulated that both sides should be free to move, but that neither should do anything. He was, therefore, within his rights in immediately beginning to transfer his troops.
Buller announced to the war office that advancing on Ladysmith by yet another line, his troops on Tuesday took Pleter's hill, and followed that initial success by carrying the Boer position beyond, the assault being successful at sunset. The dispatch is not remarkable for clearness, but it may be inferred that in Buller's opinion the position carried is the main one between his army and the Boer works on Bulwain mountain, southeast of Ladysmith. At this point he says the Boers appear to be in considerable force.
General Buller's tidings come weighted with his long list of casualties. His losses, in the four attempts to get General White out, aggregate 4000.

Ladysmith is in desperate straits.
Charles Williams, the military expert, says he learns on very high authority—presumably that of Lord Wolseley—that General White's force is almost at its last gasp.
This is not so much, says Mr. Williams, "on account of any lack of provisions or of ammunition, neither of which is exhausted, as because of the poisonous waters of the Klip river and the evil effects of the Boer position who have escaped fever, dysentery and diarrhoea are in a state of low vitality.
They can still man trenches and would probably hold their own against a last, desperate assault, but they can do nothing. General Buller now knows that, as units, the regiments will be of no use to him for months.
"The water of the Klip river is not available for drinking, and to boil it is impossible because of the scarcity of fuel. It is thick with putrid animal matter. Tea made of it has a suspended body, something like beef tea. It is laden with the sewage from the Boer camps."
In northern Cape Colony the Boers are everywhere giving way. The occupation of Rensburg by Clements is reported. The Boers falling back on Nor-valpoort; and the Boers falling back on
